Delivered the Bakerian Lecture of 1901 to the Royal Society on the Nadir of Temperature and Allied Problems. (1) Physical properties of liquid and solid hydrogen. (2) Separation of free hydrogen and other gases from air, (3) Electric resistance thermometry on the boiling point of hydrogen, (4) Experiments on the liquefaction of helium at the melting point of hydrogen. (5) Pyroelectricity and piezoelectricity. His investigations include the following: Hydrogenium, Pyridine, and Chinoline Bases, Physiological Action of Light, Problems of Spectroscopy, Liquefaction of Gases, Low Temperature Investigations, involving the scientific use of liquid Oxygen, Air, Fluorine, Hydrogen. Was the first to obtain liquid and solid hydrogen. By evaporating liquid hydrogen under diminished pressure the lowest temperature ever reached viz 13° absolute, or 40° F of frost was attained. At this nadir of temperature hydrogen became a frozen foam like mass, air a rigid inert solid, only Helium of known gases remained uncondensed resisting liquefaction. Pure metals cooled to this temperature became almost perfect conductors of electricity. Publications numerous papers contributed to the proceedings of the Royal Societies of London and Edinburgh, the Royal Institution, the British Association, the Chemical Society, etc. Address 33 Albemarle Street W, 21 Scrope Terrace, Cambridge. Clubs Athenaeum, Gerrick.

GREENWOOD, Thomas, free library advocate; author and publisher; b. Woodley, near Stockport, 9 May 1851. Educ.: at a village school, but also largely through the aid afforded by the Manchester and other public libraries. In recognition of the educational assistance derived from public libraries in the early part of his career, he entered heartily into the movement for securing free libraries throughout the country, and has been a leader in it for many years, expending much time, and distributing much literature gratuitously in support of the cause. It is largely owing to his action that so many towns have adopted the Public Libraries Acts during the past twenty years. He has travelled extensively in Europe, America, and Africa. Member of the firm of Scott, Greenwood & Co., publishers of technical books and trade journals. Publications: Tour in the United States and Canada, 1888; Eminent Naturalists, 1886; Public Libraries: a history of the movement and a manual for the organization and management of rate-supported libraries, 5 eds. to 1894; Museums and Art Galleries, 1898; Sunday School and Village Libraries, 1892; Greenwood's Library Year-Book, 1897, 1900-1; Edward Edwards, the Chief Pioneer of Municipal Public Libraries, 1902.
